

Session 2:

- We actually only killed 4 crookhorns. One fled into the dungeon below, unscathed Ribble-mead
- We have yet to learn what kind of Sage Farnham is
- Llerg is a hunter, sells meat to the Inn
- Father Dobby is a vicar, his servant's name is spelled Mabble.
- Gwomotom knows that nightworms get 8-10 feet long, 10 feet in diameter. Live in underground tunnels. Edible, but can constrict you and eat you back.
- We pile the 4 bodies together (crookhorns)
- 90° turn down the stairs
- Sound of quiet breathing, probably crookhorn
- Marching order: Tonkin, Jack, Lucien, Henrick, Gwomotom
- Jack lights a torch
- 10 foot ceilings - Very worn flagstones. Damp and crumbling stone floor, walls, ceiling
- Torch illuminates a strange-looking animal
- We enter dungeon from the north.
- 25 ft by 25 ft room

- Rope around creature's neck - tied against wall
- 2 headed chicken creature - purple gobble red and black feathers
- One sleeping head, one notices us.
- Lucien our monster lore expert has never seen anything like it. Likely a mutant.
- 3 foot tall
- Agitated at our presence
- Tries to get us as we enter the room, rope stops it
- 10 ft wide entrance on opposite side of room
- Gwomatom wants the heads as trophies
- Jack moves in with dagger but gets bit and severely wounded on account of the two heads
- Henrick natural 1 on sling attack
 - Hits Gwomatom
- Jack nicks the monster with dagger
- Gwomatom beheads both heads
- Henrick prays for Jack and heals him.
 - Can't cure Gwomatom until the next day
- Lucien listens at the door - hears hushed whispers of ^{Crook-horns} ↑
- Gwomatom is harvesting the monster corpse
- Jack and Tomkin are checking down the hallway and find three paths
- Frescoes on walls - white humanoid silhouettes in icy forest. Probably elves. Mostly faded

- Tomkin goes to door with gwomatom behind with an arrow nocked.
- We crack open the door
- Behind the door is a ring of candles and nasty bedding and crates. We don't see Crookhorns
- On a silent countdown from 3, Tomkin throws the door open
- No Crookhorns to attack, but we see a human body
- Body is a man in dirty robes.
- Tomkin taunts room in Gaff (Breggle language)
 - The escaped Crookhorn peeks from behind crates
 - Says "If you want me, Com and get me"
 - Pushes crates over in front of door - second one emerges
- Jack passes torch to Henrick
- Henrick runs through circle of candles. Nose filled with orange smoke that smells awful
- Tomkin, Jack, and Gwomatom enter the room to engage
 - Lucien takes position from behind the door
- Lucien hits Crookhorn with sling in corner
- Gwomatom hits corner Crookhorn with arrow
- Onehorned Crookhorn runs from corner to swing club but misses. Henrick is protected by god
- Crookhorns called the body their prisoner
 - still alive!
- Tomkin is engaged in melee with other Crookhorn
- Jack tries to sneak up on onehorn but is spotted
- Gwomatom lands another arrow in onehorn, killing him
- Jack kicks the corpse

- Lucien slings a rock at the other crookhorn fighting Tomkin
- Jack also slings, hits
- Tomkin swings longsword, misses. Crookhorn's leather armor is hard to breach
- Remaining crookhorn's morale is tested but stays resolve and doesn't flee.
- Lucien, Tomkin, and Jack finish off crookhorn from range
- Felled crookhorn has frothed mouth and mites in fur
- Jack uses unlit torch to prod one horn
- Call the other crookhorn the rabid one
- Jack finds some silver on the bodies
- Tomkin checking crates - suspicious looking food
- A chest is spotted
- prisoner is breathing but unconscious
- Looks like Mabble - middle aged with monk haircut
- Smoke from candles is causing headaches
- We drag chest and Mabble out to previous room where monster was
- Jack investigates chest for traps, spots a needle in lock.
- Lucien the elf looks at frescoes
 - They depict the frost elves, associated with the Cold Prince
- Jack uses a club to disarm the trapped chest
- Heavy sticks, loose bracelets, and a scrap of paper found inside. Sounds like coins are inside

Written in yl Gatt

also crudely written

- None of us can understand the language in letter
- Bracelets are 2 gold bands set with amber
- sacks full of silver and gold
- We wake Mabble
- He was following sound of pipe music, got enchanted, something hit him in the back of the head, wounding and knocking him out
- He didn't hear or see other prisoners when he drifted in and out consciousness
- We decide to go back to Lankshorn to rest, bring back treasure, and escort Mabble to safety
- We return to town by early evening
- We go with Mabble go to Dobey's cottage
 - Thatched roof
- Dobey is pleased to see him, but puts on a show to heighten apparent excitement
- He's troubled to learn that Crookhorns are so close to town
- Dobey dresses Mabble's head wound
- We go across town to the constabulary
 - Wood and stone building
- We meet a breggle at the front desk
- Ruins confirmed as Drumen Knoll
- Clerk is sceptical about Crookhorns - had nice red leather armor, helmet with horns
- We ask for the constable

- Constable is human, named Sidney Wolder - male
 - Go to the back room to meet him
- Refills his drink, offers us none
- Lucien passive-aggressively prompts him to offer us drinks
- Advises us not to go back to Drumen Knoll, pays us 200 gold pieces
- Advises we speak with Sgt. Marge Bregson if we insist on finding help to bring back to Drumen Knoll
 - Female
- Go to one of our rooms to plan
- Total loot counted: 200 sp + 500 gp in sacks, 2 750 gp bracelets
- Bagways is an inn in Lankshorn, not a separate place
- Divide treasure evenly
- Talk to Llerg at ~~home~~ ^{home} who's eating pickled eggs
- Ask him to read note written in cafe
- He's troubled by the contents
 - It says Sgt. Sidney Wolder is a spy!
 - Contains instructions to contact him
 - Spies of Nag-Lord, creator of Crookhorns
 - We bribe Llerg with gold for his silence about the letter
 - Lucien plays his mandolin, attempting to charm Llerg
 - He isn't charmed
- We go back to room to discuss constable
- Jack sends along a letter that we're leaving to ruins on moat (1 day later than reality) in an attempt to avoid an ambush on the road set up by the constable

- Lucien performs ballads "Don't look back in Fury" and "Wonder well" for camped food and drink
- Town is uninterested in joining the party on our quest
- Haymer is the next day (day before meet)
- 24th of Simsvald
- Sgt. is ranked higher than constable
- we return to Constabulary to talk to Sgt.
- Weather: Gently drizzling
- Sgt. Marge comes to speak with us (Breggle)
- Tells us rumors of King 'Pusskin to the south
- She's also uninterested in sending guards to help
- Jack makes a final appeal, wearing down Sgt.
 - Sends a soldier with us as an informant
 - we must do our best to protect us
 - Brennan is his name - human. Young guy, bright smile
 - His leather armor is unmarred, has a spear and shield
- We depart again on the ditchway to Drumen Knoll
- Few hours of travel arrive at noon
- Jack poorly sneaks to ruins ahead of party, staying in tree line
- No one visible in tower or in courtyard. Music still playing
- We approach the ruined keep, Jack ahead searching for traps or ambushers.
- Marching order: Jack, Tomkin, Brennan, Lucien, Henrick, Gwomatom
- Jack sees no sign of life, everything looks how we left it. Gwomatom doesn't see anything either

- Henrick lights his lantern
- Tomkin notices small pierce wounds in bregma corpses.
 - New from when we killed them yesterday
- Jack investigates a high stack of crates in room with the circle of candles
- sees a crack in wall behind crates, hollow wall
 - A secret door!
 - Finds a hidden button and hears a cliche
 - we can now push the wall and a door opens!
- Tomkin pushes door open more
 - Gust of snow and icy wind blows toward us
 - 10 ft long hallway snowing inside - Same kind of magic
 - Music not coming from here, but past the corridor intersection found earlier
 - No visible tracks in snow
- Beyond Corridor
 - Room with 10 ft diameter raised pool, 2 ft up
 - snow constantly falling in room
 - Lucien recounts a legend of a pool containing a chalice of great beauty
 - Tomkin enters room
 - More frescoes on walls long faded
 - Ice covers pool - frozen solid
 - stag skull carvings on outside of fountain
 - Glittering lights in pool under ice
 - Jack follows behind Tomkin
 - Chalice beneath ice, seems to have an air bubble in it

- Legend also says fairy ice mortal blood
- Jack grabs a club, hands to Tomkin
- We decide to reseal the chamber explore the rest of the dungeon before deciding what to do about the pool